

Accounting for Concreters

PFG ACCOUNTANTS & ADVISORS FORWARD THINKING BUSINESS GROWTH EXPERTS

"One thing we know, running a concreting business is hard work and there's certainly more to concreting than meets the eye. The skills of a concreter go far beyond the ability to mix, pour and apply concrete. Over the years we have mentored a number of concreters through the various stages of their business life cycle, from start up right through to sale and having an accountant who understands your trade has the potential to give you a serious competitive edge."

Manel Darwiche - Principal at PFG Accountants & Advisors

As the world's most used building material there are a multitude of different areas within the concreting industry. It's dirty and dangerous work on a job site that could be a building construction site, up on a bridge, underground or on the roads. Either way, it's taxing work mixing, laying, spreading or compacting concrete.

The physical demands don't stop there as you could be on your feet all day digging foundation trenches, mixing cement or pouring concrete then you could be on your knees levelling, cleaning or sealing the concrete. There's certainly more to concreting than meets the eye and you need to be versatile to do formwork and drive large vehicles fitted with industrial cement mixers or pump trucks. You also have to contend with heavy regulation, licensing, training and safety standards not to mention all the usual small business issues of bookkeeping, tax, PAYG, contractors, insurance and OH & S.

It's a very competitive industry and having an accountant who understands the trade can give you a serious competitive edge. One of our biggest points of difference compared to other accounting firms is our marketing expertise. We genuinely believe that marketing can be the difference between gloom and boom. If you want more customers, more sales and more profit then you simply can't just rely on referrals any more. That's why we help our concreters with their branding and show them how to harness the power of social media to win more referrals. Most importantly, we can help you create an affordable, responsive, lead generation website. We can assist you with your content, video production and even show you how to get more online reviews that in turn will help with your page rankings on Google.

In the competitive building trades you need to work smarter, not harder and these marketing tools and social media channels can accelerate your growth and success. If you're thinking of starting or buying a concreting business you can benefit from our experience. We have earned a reputation as business start-up specialists and can help you with every aspect of the business including your business structure, tax registrations, insurances, your commercial lease and your choice of accounting software. In addition, we can assist you with preparing a business plan and cash flow budget plus provide advice and assistance with finance applications for trucks, cars and machinery. No job is too big or too small for the team at PFG Accountants & Advisors.
